DOMESTIC ECONOMY!
CAMPILLION CARPET!

A new, cheap, durable, healthy, and Beautiful
FLOOR COVERING!

A substitute for oil-cloth at one-third the cost.

This carpet is produced by a peculiar combination of strong, heavy paper, printed in ornamental colors, and coated with a tough, elastic, water proof enamel which receives the water, protects the colors and paper becomes useless, and renders the carpet bright and beautiful in the extreme. Its advantages are as follows:—

Its cost renders it available to all classes; it is exceedingly smooth and glossy, and it accumulates next to no dust; it does not require to be taken up and cleaned like other carpet, and thus saves much labor and trouble; by re-coating with the Campillion Enamel occasionally as the case may require, (which costs but a trifle,) it will last indefinitely, even an age, and always appear new and bright; it has use no reliance what ever is placed upon the paper for wear, but excessively is upon the water-proof coating, the lightest paper being used only to secure the colors. Paper has recently been used for a variety of purposes, even for trunks, roofs, floor bags and wearing apparel, but the first attempt, either in Europe or America, to convert it into carpet or floor covering, all concede it to be an entire success!

We have purchased the right for columbia county and can furnish the carpet to merchants at manufacturers prices.

🖙 You are invited to call and examine the goods at our store. M'KELVY, NEAL & CO.

Choice Poetry.

A REMARKABLE POEM.

[THE following striking poem was recited by Miss Lizzie Doten, a Spiritual trance speaker at the close of a recent lecture in Boston. She professed to give it impromptu, so far as she was concerned, and to speak under the direct influence of the spirit of Edgar A. Poe. Whatever may be the truth of its production, the poem is in several respects a remarkable one. Miss Doten is apparently incapable of originating such a poem. If it was written for her by some one else, and merely committed to memory and recited by her, the poem is nevertheless wonderful as a reproduction of the singular music and alliteration of Poe's style, and as manifesting the same intensity of feeling. Whoever wrote the poem must have been exceedingly familiar with Poe, and deeply in sympathy with his spirit. But if Miss Doten is honest, and the poem originated as she says it did, it is unquestionably the most astonishing thing that Spiritualism has produced. It does not follow, necessarily, in that case that Poe himself made the poem, although we are asked to believe a great many spiritual things on less cogent evidence—but it is in any view of it that may be taken, a very singular and mysterious production. There is in the second verse an allusion to a previous poem that purported to come from the spirit of Poe, which was published several years since and attracted much attention, but the following poem is of a higher order and much more like Poe than the other.—Springfield Republican.

From the throne of life eternal,
From the home of love supernal,
Where the angel feet make music over all the starry floor—
Mortals, I have come to meet you,
Come with words of peace to greet you,
And to tell you of the glory that is mine forevermore.

Once before I found a mortal
Waiting at the heavenly portal—
Waiting but to catch some echo from that ever-opening door;
Then I seized his quickened being,
And through all his inward seeing,
Caused my burning inspiration in a fiery flood to pour!

Now I come more meekly human,
And the weak lips of a woman
Touch with fire from off the altar, not with burnings as of yore;
But in holy love descending,
With her chastened being blending,
I would fill your souls with music from the bright celestial shore.

As one heart yearns for another,
As a child turns to its mother,
From the golden gates of glory turn I to the earth once more,
Where I drained the cup of sadness,
Where my soul was stung to madness,
And life's bitter, burning billows swept my burdened being o'er.

Here the harpies and the ravens
Human vampyres—sordid cravens,
Preyed upon my soul and substance till I writhed in anguish sore;
And I then seemed mismated
For I felt accursed and fated,
Like a restless, wrathful spirit, wandering on the Stygian shore.

Tortured by a nameless yearning,
Like a frost-fire, freezing, burning,
Did the purple, pulsing life-tide through its fevered channels pour,
Till the golden bowl—Life's token—
Into shining shards was broken,
And my chained and chafing spirit leapt from out its prison door.

But while living, striving, dying,
Never did my soul cease crying:
"Ye who guide the fates and furies, give, oh, give me, I implore,
From the myriad hosts of nations—
From the countless constellations,
One poor spirit that can love me—one that I, too, can adore!"

Through this fervent aspiration
Found my fainting soul salvation,
For, from out its blackened fire-crypts, did my quickened spirit soar;
And my beautiful ideal—
Not to saintly to be real—
Burst more brightly on my vision than the fancy-formed Lenore.

Mid the surging seas she found me,
With the billows breaking round me,
And my saddened, sinking spirit in her arms of love upbore;
Like a lone one, weak and weary,
Wandering in the midnight dreary,
On her sinless, saintly bosom brought in safety to the heavenly shore.

Like the breath of blossoms blending,
Like the prayers of saints ascending,
Like the rainbow's seven-hued glory, blent were souls forevermore.
Earthly love and lust enslaved me,
But divinest love hath saved me
And I know now, first and only, how to love and to adore.

Oh, my mortal friends and brothers!
We are each and all another's,
And the soul that gives most freely from its treasure, hath the more.
Would you lose your life, you find it;
And in giving love you bind it,
Like an amulet of safety, to your heart forever more.

Continued.

How I fared in Vienna, I have already told you. The lady Von Tarnau had vanished. The hotel had passed into new hands; and so there was no one to give me any information. My acquaintances knew as little of her and her whereabouts as I. They wrote at my request to Augsburg, whence she or her aunt had brought letters of credit and introduction. But the Augsburg correspondent had in the mean time died, and his heirs could give intelligence of no lady Von Tarnau.

Enough; I was in despair. I was most heartily vexed with myself. For was it not my own fault, that, during my first stay in Vienna, I had been so unpardonably negligent as not to inform myself of her family and residence? Indeed, then I never once thought that I was going to fall in love with her a year and a quarter afterwards.

In the midst of my trouble, what enlivened me the most, although it increased my passion, was—her room. That room I now occupied. I found the same furniture still there, the very chair on which she sat, and the table at which she wrote. The whole past lived so vividly before my eyes and around me, that I absolutely sprung up from my seat all in a flutter, upon the slightest noise at the door, thinking that it was she herself and her aunt coming in.

In the room itself nothing remained unsearched, for I still hoped to discover some trace of her. Twenty times did I examine the walls from the floor to the ceiling to find, among the signatures of travellers there, her name, or something that would lead to the discovery of her home. All in vain!

Odd—but trifling enough, the very first day I went into the room, I found in the drawer of the writing-table—let no one laugh—a beautiful, shining, brown Bean. You know what a sacred symbol this vegetable had become to me, and now I had found it in Josephine's room! I took up the bean with the greatest care. And as I now gave up the fond hope of ever finding the loveliest being upon earth, I took the bean to a jeweller, and had it set in gold, in order to wear it continually by a silken guard round my neck, as a memento of the loveliest of hersex and of my sad romance.

I then left Vienna. I was unhappy and comfortless. I swore never to marry. Ah, one swears many things in his haste!

* * * * * * * * *

I returned to my native city like a widower. All young ladies appeared to me intolerable, stale, common; I buried myself in business; I diverted my mind by engaging in large speculations; saw no company, made no visits. Josephine's image hovered continually around me like a guardian angel, and the bean upon my breast was as precious a possession as if it had been bestowed by her own hand. Let no one grudge the unhappy his dreams! I even at last imagined that the beautiful Tarnau had herself placed the bean in the drawer of the writing-table. A happy fancy is in the end as good as any philosophy by which one would fain console himself.

My outward man, indeed, was not indicative of this wonderful happiness; for all thought me melancholy, sick, and like to die. Aunts and cousins beset me with entreaties, invitations, and plans of pleasure; even physicians were sent to my house. I would have nothing to do with them.

To free myself from my tormentors, and to show that I was still like other men, I went now and then to some of the evening parties at the houses of my friends.

One evening I accepted an invitation to Councillor Hildebrand's. Now you shall hear the catastrophe of my story.

* * * * * * * * *

I went to the councillor's. The company were all known to me with the exception of one person, who was introduced to me as a lieutenant-colonel in the Russian service, and who had lately come into possession of an estate about a league and a half from the city. To this, however, I did not pay much attention at the moment. I bowed silently, laid aside my hat and took my seat. Conversation was lively;—so much the better for me, I had no especial desire to talk.

The Russian officer, a large, stout man, of an agreeable and dignified figure, already past sixty, still full of animation, chiefly engaged my attention. He had a ribbon at his button-hole, and a couple of scars on his forehead and cheek. His voice was loud and authoritative; it was easy to see in him a commanding officer. The conversation turned now upon Persia, and now upon Moldau, where the lieutenant-colonel had made campaigns. The company listened to him with pleasure, and he told his stories well.

After supper the conversation grew still more lively. The old officer told of a battle, in which, wounded in the breast, he had fallen from his horse and been taken prisoner by the Turks. When in the excitement of his narrative he tore open his vest to show the wound, we remarked that he wore next to his heart a little golden locket fastened by a silken guard. He drew out the locket and exclaimed: "The Janissaries robbed me of every thing; but this jewel, the most precious of my possessions, I saved!"

Of course, all imagined that it must be a diamond of uncommon size, or a pearl of immense value, one of his Eastern spoils.

"Oh, not at all," cried he, "it is only a bean!"

"A bean!" exclaimed every one.

At these words I became, I believe, red as fire or pale as death, or both by turns, for I could not command myself for surprise. "How comes the man by a bean which he wears set in gold like a sacred relic, just like me?" thought I. Let any one imagine himself in my situation, and he will know how I felt. I longed to learn why he wore the bean. But I was confounded; I could not bring out a syllable. I tossed off a glass of punch to get courage to ask the question. But I was saved the trouble by all present.

"I will willingly tell you," said the old officer, and filled his pipe; "but I am afraid the story is not sufficiently interesting. Fill your pipes gentlemen."

Every one obeyed, even I, although I was no smoker. But I took the cold pipe between my lips, from pure fear that the colonel should refuse to proceed if he saw me without his favorite instrument.

* * * * * * * * *

Gentlemen, I was a cadet in my fifteenth year, and a lieutenant in my twentieth, said the old gentleman.—But in his five-and-twentieth one is something more than a mere lieutenant. He is a god, nota bene! if he is in love. And that was I.

Our colonel had a daughter, the most beautiful and bewitching maiden in the whole kingdom, and I had, along with two sound eyes, an extra sound heart. This explains everything. The young countess of Obendorf—but I love to call her to myself by her baptismal name of Sophia, for, nota bene! I was no count—Sophia then was sixteen years old, and I, as I said before, five and twenty; you can easily imagine what mischief arose therefrom. It was quite unavoidable, I assure you. You all see that plainly enough; but the colonel, who had the eye of a hawk in regimental matters, did not see it at all; but my love, nota bene! was no regimental matter: for the rest, I stood very high with him; he was as fond of me as a son. He had known my parents, who were no longer living; he stood to me as a father, and I would have given any thing in the world to have been his son. But that was not to be thought of. He was a colonel, I a lieutenant; he a count, I not; he rich as Cœsus, I poor as a church-mouse. Now you know all. The distance between us was too great.

The countess Sophia did not make such nice distinctions about titles and wealth as the old colonel, and yet in many things she was more prudent than he.

I remarked, indeed, that she treated me in a more friendly manner than any other of the officers; that she liked best to talk with me; liked best to dance with me; liked best to walk with me in the garden in summer, and to go sleighing with me in the winter,—however, I could not conclude from all this whether she loved me. But that I loved, adored, idolized her, that I knew, and that I knew only too well.

A thousand times was I ready to declare myself, and throw myself at her feet—but, good heavens! I have since gone with my battalion to storm a battery with a lighter heart than I was able then to advance a single step towards Sophia. It will not do said I.

But I will not detain you longer with the history of my love and sufferings, but proceed directly to the main point.

One evening I had to carry a report to the colonel. He was not at home; that, indeed, was no great misfortune, for the countess Sophia was sitting all alone, and she permitted me to await her father's return in her company.

How curious it was! If we met at large parties, it seemed as if there would be no end to our talk; but when we were alone, tete-a-tete, as they say, we knew not what to say, nay, we knew well enough, but, nota bene! we could not say it! Whether you ever experienced such fatalities, gentlemen, in your young days, I know not.

On the table before the young countess lay a draught-board, upon which a certain game was played with a number of white and brown beans.

After a long pause in our conversation—but, nota bene! such pauses were any thing but tedious—the countess invited me to play. She gave me the brown beans and kept the white. They belonged to her, of course, on account of their color,—the emblem of innocence. We played. The countess won. That led to quarreling, and I liked to quarrel with her, for then I could say many things to her that I could never muster courage to say in cold blood.

And now it was just as if we were in a large party; that is we talked fast enough about the stakes. The countess Sophia had wit; she laughed and teased me, and drove me so with her sallies into a corner, that in my despair I knew not what to answer. In my vexation I took up one of my brown beans, and to punish the beautiful jester, who laughed at me so roguishly, threw it at her. The bean made a parabola and threatened the delicate nose of my opponent. but as she drew back her pretty head to avoid the light bomb—Ah, my shot fell through the folds of her neckerchief down into her bosom. Luckily it was no arrow

I was terribly frightened, and was all in a glow in my agony. Sophia blushed, and cast her eyes modestly down. Jest, play, and quarrel were now all at an end. I could not speak, and she was silent. I feared that I had incurred her anger through my awkwardness. I looked timidly towards her, she raised her eyes and cast upon me rather a dark look—that I could not bear. I arose, and bent my knee before the adored one, pressed her hand to my lips and implored pardon. She answered not a syllable, yet she did not draw away her hand from me.

"O countess! O dear Sophia! don't be vexed with me. I should die," cried I, "if you were angry with me. For only for you, only through you do I live. Without you life is worthless. You are my life, my heaven, my all."

Enough; one word followed another. How much did I say to her with tears in my eyes, and with tears in her eyes how much did she listen to! I begged for an answer and yet gave her no time for an answer, and, nota bene! the colonel stood three steps from us in the room without either of us having seen or heard him enter. I believe he must have glided in like a ghost? God save him! he is now in Paradise.

His awful voice startled us like a clap of thunder, as he poured out upon us a whole string of regimental oaths, old and new. I sprang up before him. Sophia, without losing her presence of mind, did the same. We were on the point of excusing ourselves, if there really was any thing to be excused. But he would not allow us to utter a word.

"Silence!" shouted he, as if, instead of two poor sinners, he had to deal with a couple of regiments of cavalry. "You, Sophia, depart to-morrow—and you, M. Lieutenant, will please ask your dismissal, and quit the province or you are a dead man."

With this he turned upon his heel and left the room. I must confess, the prudence of the man in the midst of his fury was worthy of admiration; for I held it was very prudent in him that he left us alone; we had still much to say to each other.

The countess Sophia stood there in the middle of the room with her pretty head sunk upon her breast, and her hands negligently folded before her like a statue.

"Oh Sophia!" said I, and rushed towards her, and, folding her in my arms, pressed her fervently to my heart: "Sophia, now I lose you forever!

"No," she replied firmly, "not forever: so long as I breathe shall your image live in my heart." And this was said in a tone

The Columbian
—AND—
Bloomsburg Democrat.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY MORNING, JAN. 8, 1869.

☞ THE COLUMBIAN has the Largest Circulation of any paper published in Northern Pennsylvania, and is also a much larger sheet than any of its cotemporaries; and is therefore the best medium for advertising in this section of the State.

What A Pity!

BY a consolidation of the COLUMBIAN and Democrat, we knew that we should deal Radicalism in the county a heavy blow, because its main reliance for future success was upon our own discords and divisions; but we had no idea our opponents would betray their chagrin by such howls of anguish as went out through the columns of the Republican last week. Assuming that Mr. Jacoby owned his subscribers, and could transfer them with the same facility as the former editor of the Republican did his, he charges him with corrupt motives in a regular and ordinary business transaction.

What is it that touches our cotemporary to the quick? Knowing the past divisions of the Democracy he hopes to gain the support of the former subscribers of the Democrat, and thus alienate them from us. He does not know us. Whatever may be our divisions on local questions we are now and always have been united against Radicalism, and the effort to breed discontent will prove as futile as the motive is malicious.

Nor will his frantic appeals to the "Billmeyers, McNinch and the disciples of that tried and faithful Democrat, Andrew Freas," avail him. They are too shrewd politicians to be caught with such chaff, and the effort to coax them into the Republican fold will recoil on the head of the author. The more radical a Democrat is, the less inclined he will be to trust his politics to the new-fledged editor over the way, whose columns openly justify and advocate Negro Suffrage. In conclusion we would say that up to this time the old patrons of the Democrat have rallied around us in the most gratifying manner, and pledge us their cordial support. Not one of them has stopped on account of the change.

The State Convention.

UNLESS postponed, our next State Convention will meet March Fourth next. We think the time is premature. We desire to elect our candidates for Governor and Judge of the Supreme Court this year, and in order to attain success, must be prepared to meet our opponents at all points. Why name our candidates and propose a platform several months before the election? Let us postpone the time and see what course Grant intends to pursue.

The questions of Reconstruction, of Finance, of Currency, must be met by the new Congress, and we should be prepared to take the field after they have indicated their policy on these questions.

UNLESS this Legislature proves to be more economical and faithful than it now promises to be, you may look for reverse and defeat at the polls next fall.

The above is part of a dispatch to the Scranton Republican from Harrisburg. This is an intimation of what we may expect the coming session. Even radical papers despair of economy in a Legislature elected by themselves.

LAW PARTNERSHIP.—We understand that A. P. Spinney and James Bryson, Esq'rs., have formed a law partnership and will have their office in L. P. Garner's building in the room recently occupied by Peppler, Moodie & Co.—Ashland Advocate.

BOOK NOTICES.—We have received the first number of Capt. Mayne Reid's Magazine "Onward," published by Carleton, 497 Broadway, New York, at $3 50. It is written, as the title page sets forth, for the youth of America. The reputation of Capt. Reid as a writer of stories in which the most valuable information is skillfully blended, is maintained in the book before us. The contents are spicy and readable. The magazine, to judge from the present number, is the most sensible we have yet seen for young people.

'TOO TRUE.'—A charming little story written in simple, natural style, yet containing enough of exciting interest to preserve it from tameness. It is well printed and bound by G. P. Putnam & Son, 661 Broadway, N. Y. The writer modestly conceals his or her name, for we are yet undecided as to which sex is entitled to the credit of having produced what is, to say the least, a very readable book.

'SEARCH AFTER TRUTH.'—This work written by Geo. W. Egleston, is addressed especially to young men, and is well worthy of their perusal. It sets forth plainly, but with force the, necessity of Christian faith and depicts the rewards of a Christian life. The book has been written with evident care and by one who is impressed with the truth of the principles he sets forth. Published by G. P. Putnam & Son, 661 Broadway N. Y.

'NO LOVE LOST.'—A poem by W. D. Howell. It is beautifully printed on tinted paper, and bound in exquisite style, with several fine steel engravings. It is intended and fitted for a Christmas or New Year's present and would grace the table of any of our fair lady friends. Published by G. P. Putnam & Son, 661 Broadway, N. Y., who deserve great credit for the admirable style in which it is presented to the public.

HEARTH AND HOME.—The first number of Hearth and Home, just issued by Pettingill, Bates & Co., is a large, handsome paper, and its literary contentfully come up to the promise of the advertisements which heralded its appearance. Mr. Donald G. Mitchell (Ike Marvel) and Mrs. Stowe furnish excellent articles in their special velus; and there are good contributions from Bryant, Holmes, Trowbridge Grace Greenwood, Madam Le Vert, and others. Nast supplies a large spirited picture of Santa Claus; and several of the articles are well illustrated by other designers.

VALEDICTORY.

From the Bloomsburg Democrat.

This week closes my editorial career, in Columbia County, for at least a number of years. On the 26th of December, 1868, I sold my entire interest in the BLOOMSBURG DEMOCRAT to Capt. C. B. BROCKWAY, editor of the Columbian, of this town. The two papers will be consolidated, first issue appearing under the new arrangement on Friday next, edited and controlled by the present manager and proprietor of the Columbian. It will appear under the title of "The Columbian and Bloomsburg Democrat," greatly improved in its mechanical arrangements and other respects. It is the intention of the proprietor to spare no pains, with the facilities already in his possession, and yet to be acquired, to make this paper the neatest, best, and cheapest weekly in the State. In size, it is decidedly the largest paper in the County, and in the State there are few, if any, that surpass its dimensions. It is ably and carefully edited, and justly merits a liberal and hearty support at the hands of the Democracy. Mr. BROCKWAY is yet a young man, though a gentleman of large experience for one who has lived so small a number of years, and with his legal knowledge, coupled with his political and newspaper experience, it is to be hoped that he will be able to publish a journal which will meet the expectations of all, and take rank among the highest papers in the State.

All pre-paid subscriptions will be filled by Mr. BROCKWAY; credit having been carried from our books to his in all cases where the time has not expired for which the paper was paid. If any mistakes have occurred, in making this transfer of credits, they can be easily rectified by calling and examining our books.

By some it may be enquired why this sale was made, and the consolidation of the two papers effected; to which question there are several answers, many of which are so well understood by the Democracy of the county that a full explanation is unnecessary: In the first place, there is no necessity for two Democratic journals in this town; in the second place, the Democracy of the county do not furnish patronage sufficient to afford anything over and above a decent livelihood for three publishers; and, in the third place, I desire to disconnect myself from the newspaper business at present, that I might enjoy a little rest, after eleven years of editorial life, and settle and collect my accounts. If these reasons are not sufficient, I will be pleased to explain more fully to all who may call upon me.

I had charge and control of the STAR OF THE NORTH in 1857, prior to the death of REUBEN WEAVER, Esq., and in January, 1858, purchased the establishment at an Administrator's sale. This was done under discouraging circumstances, the subscription list being less than three hundred, the advertising and jobbing patronage small, and myself a comparative stranger to the people of the county. In less than a year, with the assistance of my newly acquired friends, the subscription more than doubled, and the advertising patronage was made quite encouraging. The STAR was published by me for over four years without the least interruption, until October 16th, 1862, when ABRAHAM LINCOLN "took us for a soldier." Not having plenty of "stamps," and our friends mostly being in the same fix, I concluded, as this was a short draft, that I would close the office. I did so; and having no friends in Canada, entered the army—served my time, got an honorable discharge, and wasn't Abolitionized in the least.

In August, 1863, I returned from the army, revived the STAR and continued its publication until February, 1866, when the purchase of the Columbia Democrat was effected by E. R. IKELER, Esq., with whom we formed a co-partnership, and consolidated the two papers under the title of COLUMBIA DEMOCRAT AND STAR OF THE NORTH. This co-partnership lasted some seven months or more, when the interest of Mr. IKELER was disposed of to JOSIAH P. SHUMAN, whose connection with the paper continued until January, 1867. After his retirement the entire control and editorial labors of the paper fell upon myself. This change in the establishment naturally disjointed matters more or less; and at the out-start of the second volume, after the consolidation, while I had exclusive control, the title was changed to that of BLOOMSBURG STAR AND DEMOCRAT. Under that name I have published the paper nearly two years; and during this time I have seen some sunshine as well as cloudy weather. The life of a newspaper editor is not the most pleasant under the best of circumstances. With subscription and advertising bills scattered all "over creation," compositors, from the "jour" down, crying for copy, the Landlord and Express Agent at the door knocking for admission to collect bills, there is enough to distract and drive an editor to madness unless he possess an impenetrable skull. Then, on the other hand, partially to make up for all these annoyances and perplexities, the editor's heart is occasionally made glad by the presentation of baskets of strawberries, apples, grapes, and at proper seasons a fat gobbler; besides, "free tickets" of admission to all the puppet shows that travel the country.

It will be seen, however, that all these possess very little of the substantials of life.

In parting with the DEMOCRAT I do not propose to leave the county. Too many of my best days have been spent here among the Democracy for me to start in search of a new field of labor.

I shall ever hold all those with whom I have acted during past political struggles in high remembrance, and it will be my greatest pleasure to be able, at some early day, to reciprocate whatever of countenance and favor I have received.

Sunday School Convention.

FOR THE COLUMBIAN & DEMOCRAT.

MR. EDITOR:

PERHAPS many of your readers are looking for the proceedings of the Sunday School Convention, which has just closed its sessions. I herewith furnish you a synopsis. To give the details in a full report would be quite lengthy and would take up more space in your valuable paper that you would like to spare.

The convention organized by electing D. A. Beckley President, Thos. Creveling Vice President, and Dr. J. Schuyler Secretary. An address of welcome was then delivered by Rev. D. J. Waller, in which he adverted to the origin and progress of the institution of Sunday Schools.

On motion of Prof. Best, Rev. Mr. Taylor of Philadelphia, Secretary of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, was requested to direct the manner and management of the convention.

A committee on finance was appointed, and the remainder of the first session was taken up in an address by Rev. Mr. Taylor, which was a rich treat and elicited great interest from all who were present, which were comparatively few; but as it was talked about town the church building was well filled during the remainder of the sessions. After recess Rev. N. Spear addressed the convention on the difficulties of procuring good reliable teachers.

Rev. Mr. Taylor then gave us some useful information in regard to blackboard exercises, and whilst he gave a lesson on it, the whole convention including the little children, manifested the most intense interest. His subject was the call and conversion of Teachers. He directed his remarks to the children, having them all answer in concert. He told about Zaccheus being a sinner, and how kindly our Saviour called him down from the tree, that his great business was to keep and save such men, and then of the result in his confession and willingness to restore what he had fraudulently taken from any one. As he would repeat the prominent features in the lesson, to get the children to comprehend it, which all seemed to understand by the manner in which they answered the questions, he would put most important words on the black-board, such as Zaccheus, tree, salvation, guest, abide, seek, save, lost and others. These words were so placed in different lines, that a little filling up made them almost instantly, and to the surprise of most of those present, into verse as follows:

As to Zaccheus in the tree,
So my Saviour speak to me;
In my home and heart abide,
Be my constant guest and guide.
Thy salvation let me boast—
Thou did'st seek and save the lost:
Jesus cleanse and change my soul.

The same was then sung by Mr. Taylor, who, by the way, is a most capital singer. The whole convention joined in with a fervor not often witnessed.

Prof. H. S. Osburn of Lafayette College occupied the remainder of the afternoon's session on the use of blackboards and maps in studying and in teaching bible truths. Having traveled through the "Holy Land," he could make his subject very interesting.

Rev. D. J. Waller made a few pertinent remarks on the appliances for Sabbath Schools, contrasting them with what were in use when he was a Sunday School Scholar. He said Prof. Osburn's, magnificent map which the convention had in use, would have been considered a great novelty thirty years ago.

The convention adjourned for the evening session, which met at 7 o'clock with a full house. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Mr. Dickinson. Rev. D. J. Waller addressed the convention on the relations of parents to the Sabbath School, which was followed by a few very appropriate remarks by Rev. Mr. Dickinson to the effect that the relations were close, tender and permanent. Rev. Mr. Taylor assigned some causes of parents' indifference, such as the manner of conducting the Schools, the ill-ventilated apartments and unsightly places in which they were mostly held. Prof. Osburn then gave some account of his travels through Syria and Palestine, of the manners and customs of the people, there being very little difference between them at present and when the Bible was written, and the necessity of a knowledge of them in order to understand the illustrations, so frequent throughout the bible, drawn from them.

After a singing exercise, the question box was opened, and the following questions propounded, viz:

1st. What is the best method to get parents to attend Sabbath school?

2nd. What is the best method to secure order in the Sabbath school, especially to put a stop to whispering?

3rd. How can Sunday school teachers be induced to attend regularly the teachers' weekly meeting?

These were answered very satisfactorily by Mr. Taylor at some length. The most essential thing to accomplish these ends is to make the school and teachers' meeting interesting.

The convention then adjourned to meet next day at 9 o'clock.

When the hour arrived, Rev. Mr. Rice conducted the opening devotional exercises. The conductors not being present the Chairman suggested a discussion on the tardiness of teachers and irregularities, following it up with some very appropriate remarks. Prof. Best then pressed the duty of punctuality on teachers as a duty they could not shrink without great and culpable neglect. Rev. D. C. John said he endorsed the remarks of the last speaker, and then drew a striking contrast between regularity of teachers in common and higher schools with teachers in Sabbath schools. All admitted punctuality in the former, which was just as essential, if not more so, in the Sabbath school.

Rev. Mr. Dickinson gave some pointed rebukes to lazy, punctually-tardy-always-behind teachers, by citing the example of his wife, who had the care of seven children, without help in her domestic duties, yet always punctual with her class at 9 o'clock in the morning, with scarcely an exception. Rev. Mr. Rice addressed the convention on the same subject.

Rev. Mr. Taylor was called to give his views on the common library books found in schools, which he did at some length, condemning many of them as worthless trash, whilst many were very good.

A lesson was then given on the waters of Palestine by Prof. Osburn, eliciting great interest, which was followed by a black-board exercise by Rev. Mr. Taylor; first in preparing the lesson and applying the same to the spies sent into Canaan, which was put into verse and sung.

The morning session was closed by singing the long metre doxology and benediction by Rev. Mr. Melick.

Afternoon session opened by Rev. Mr. Spear, which was followed by a singing exercise, conducted by Rev. Mr. Taylor. Rev. Mr. Thomas addressed the children, as this session was more particularly for them, on the natural state of the heart and redemption by faith in a Redeemer, and an exhortation to live for him. Singing exercise again by Rev. Mr. Taylor.

Prof. Walker then addressed the convention, directing his discourse to the children, on the great end of life, simplifying it by the familiar illustration of a watch.

After some more exercises in singing, Prof. Osburn addressed the children, which was well calculated to inspire holy ambition in their lives. Rev. Mr. Rice followed, and urged the great importance of giving our hearts to Jesus.

Rev. Mr. Taylor next gave a blackboard exercise on the Saviour's birth, mission, death and resurrection, putting it into verse, and singing the same, and then prayed for these blessings which he had just been teaching.

Rev. D. J. Waller urged the people to contribute in order to defray the expenses of the convention, after which a collection was taken up. Benediction by Rev. J. P. Tustin.

Devotional exercises of the evening session were conducted by Rev. J. P. Tustin. Rev. D. J. Waller gave a Bible-class lesson. Subject—"Melchisedek." Singing again conducted by Mr. Taylor, after which the question box was opened and several questions propounded, one of which was in relation to the Bible-class lesson just closed, to wit: "Why was Melchisedek appointed a priest if he knew not his parents, as was necessary?" Rev. D. J. Waller answered that as Melchisedek lived prior to the Levitical priesthood, he was not subject to the rites of that economy. Several other questions were asked, and answered by Rev. Mr. Taylor, one of which we shall only note—"Should a school have a uniform lesson?" With the exception of the infant class, he said they should by all means, just as necessary as to have a uniform dinner for a family.

Prof. Osburn gave a short account of the habits of the people of Palestine. As Bethlehem meant "house of bread," it seemed very appropriate at the present day, for they had plenty of very excellent bread. When he described the manner of kneading it, in large troughs by tramping it with their feet, holding to a rope overhead, it caused some merriment. In answer to some queries, he said the girls of Bethlehem were very handsome.

Singing was then conducted by Mr. Taylor, which was followed by an address by Prof. Best on the powers of the mind being improved by exercising them. A blackboard lesson and exercise was then conducted by Mr. Taylor on the atonement, commencing with God's covenant promises in the Old Testament, and ending with the consummation in the death and resurrection of Jesus in the New Testament. The important words were placed on the black-board one after another, as they occurred in the lesson, and when he concluded, a little filling up brought it out in verse, thus:

Faithful covenant-keeping God,
Sprinkle me with Jesus' blood,—
Better than the law on stone,
Jesus doth for sin atone.
Happier than thy saints of old,
Make me in my Jesus bold;
By the new and living way,
Draw me near to thee, I pray.

After singing this and the long metre doxology, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. N. Spear, thus closing the labors of two days.

There was a session held on Thursday morning, the business being principally an organization of a County Association. We shall reserve it for another week's issue, as we have already, we fear, extended these notes too far in trespassing beyond the space allotted us in your paper. Respectfully,

J. S.

SENTENCE OF THE BROADHEAD MURDERERS—STROUDSBURG, January 2.—The prisoners, Brooke and Orme, were brought into court this morning to receive their sentence. Each made a speech, confessing the killing, but endeavoring to justify themselves by pleading self defense. They also tried to hide behind drunkenness, although they professed to remember every point in the affair. The day of execution will be fixed by the Governor.

Effects of Reconstruction.

GEORGIA and Arkansas are "reconstructed, and on a loyal basis. In order to show how thoroughly the work has been done, and how beautifully the system works we clip the following dispatches from the New York Times, a Radical daily.

SAVANNAH, Dec. 30.

The Sheriff of the county and two assistants, on Tuesday, went to Hayward's plantation, on the Ogechee River, 11 miles from this city, to arrest seventeen negroes charged with shooting watchmen on the plantations, and carrying off the crops of planters. They made five arrests. At Station No 1, on the Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, they were surrounded by about one hundred armed negroes, who rescued the prisoners and disarmed and robbed the Sheriff and destroyed the warrants, and threatened to kill him if he ever served a legal process again in that vicinity. The negroes then separated into squads and marched back to the plantations, avowing that they would have the heart's blood of every white man on the Ogechee River, saying the war has commenced. One negro watchman is supposed to be murdered. Two white men were badly hurt, and all the white men were obliged to flee to the city to save their lives. The women and children are in the hands of the mob, and have been carried off into the woods. Great excitement exists in this community, and a Sheriff's posse of between 200 and 300 citizens will leave at daybreak tomorrow to rescue the women and children. The military decline to interfere until the power of the civil authorities for preserving order are exhausted.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 30.

Reports from Marion, Ark., this afternoon, represent that the militia at Augusta, fearing they may be attacked, are building stockades and throwing up works around the jail, where the prominent citizens who have been arrested are confined. No cause has yet been given for their arrest. The privates wear no uniform, and it is impossible to distinguish them from other negroes, except by their arms.

Passengers from the Arkansas River country report that the fields are white with the cotton which the planters are unable to pick, the hands having gone off to join the militia.

The Chicago Platform declared that "reconstruction was an assured success." Who can deny it in the face of the above statements?

WHO dresses well, dresses cheaply. Clothes of inferior quality, made in an unworkmanlike manner will always prove the most expensive in the long run although a trifle may be saved at the first purchase. If you wish well-fitting, durable, comfortable and handsome suits, call on CHEMBERLIN. He keeps just that kind and his prices are as comfortable as his suits are.

PROSPECTUS. "THE AGE," for 1869. CIRCULATE THE DOCUMENTS. A Daily and Weekly Democratic Journal in Philadelphia! Improvements in every Department, Political, Literary, Commercial, Financial, and Agricultural.

The publishers of The Age beg to call the attention of the Democratic and Conservative masses to the Daily and Weekly issue of their popular Journal. The general dissemination of sound political information must result in great good to the Democratic party. Wherever Radicalism sends its poison, let us be prompt in furnishing the antidote!

We have just finished an exciting political struggle, and the Democratic party, vigorous and undismayed, is now ready to begin the fight again, and to fight on until victory crowns our efforts.

One of the most powerful energies in securing victory is the Democratic press of the country, and every man who can afford to subscribe for a Democratic newspaper should at once do so.

THE DAILY AGE

Discussions of all subjects of general interest and importance; editorial comments on government, Politics, Trade, Finance, and all the current questions of the day, and will have all the characteristics of a live, leading, progressive journal.

The Columbian.

BLOOMSBURG, FRIDAY, JAN. 8, 1869.

THE County Auditors met on Monday last and adjusted the public accounts for 1868.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Roat, a carpenter, had his finger and thumb badly cut by a circular saw at the establishment of Wolf & Barton in this place, on Monday last.

THE County Commissioners, on last Wednesday, appointed Gen Hower of Locust township, mercantile appraiser, E. H. Little, Attorney for Commissioners and W. Knickbaum, Clerk.

WE are informed that Judge M'Reynolds has purchased the house and lot owned by Andrew Creveling on the corner of Third and Main Streets for $4550.00. We will be glad to have the Judge for a townsman.

WE are indebted to our old friend S. W. Buck of Leraysville for a missing copy of the COLUMBIAN lately advertised. This is the second courtesy of the kind we have experienced at his hands. He will accept our thanks.

ON Friday last Mayor Hoffman was inaugurated as Governor of New York, and Daniel M. Fox as Mayor of Philadelphia. This gives the Empire State a Democratic Governor, and the Quaker City a Democratic Mayor, the first for many years.

THE Ball given by the Rescue Fire Company of this place on New Year's night was a success. The ball-room was well filled and all present seemed to thoroughly enjoy the occasion. The Bloomsburg Brass Band and the Wilkes Barre Drum Corps were present.

THE last week's Republican while lamenting the consolidation of the two Democratic papers here, said: "Buildings have been erected, streets opened," etc. Will the Doctor state whether he is opposed to any of the improvements he is complaining about. Put yourself on record for or against them.

ON Tuesday morning last, the mangled body of a man was found lying side of the L. & B. R. R., track, a short distance below Kingston. He was identified as a brakeman employed on a freight train. He probably fell from his train on the previous evening. We have not learned his name.

FIRE.—On Monday morning last the Seminary buildings in Millville were discovered to be on fire. The flames were finally extinguished after damaging the building to the extent of some $600. The heaviest loss falls upon Prof. Walker whose furniture etc., was injured to the extent of $1,800 to $2,000.

I. W. HARTMAN having purchased his brother's interest in the store will continue the business on an improved plan. The store room having been enlarged, gives him greater facilities for doing business. He proposes dealing on the ready pay system, and has already marked his goods down to a figure to warrant and encourage persons wishing to buy cheap, to call and see. *

To say, as we most solemnly do, that the Republican has now a subscription list larger than any paper in Columbia county, shows that we have met with a reward.

The above has been standing in the Republican for several weeks. It is not true and the editor knows it. We venture the assertion that our circulation is not only several hundred larger than his, but that before the purchase of the Democrat it was larger in this and adjoining counties. Now, Doctor, "haul down the flaunting lie" or come to time.

PATENT-RIGHTS.—We would warn our readers against buying patent-rights of strangers. In nine cases out of ten they are swindlers. The usual method is to take a note, and accompany it with a verbal or separate written condition, that it is not to be paid until the profits reach a certain amount The note is sold before it comes due, and the speculator in patent-rights is sued for the amount. Quite a number of suits are now pending in our court, which have arisen from these cases.

DUTIES OF POSTMASTERS.—Much trouble would be saved, if postmasters were more generally familiar with their duties. Postmasters should remember that when a paper remains dead in the office for four consecutive weeks, it is their duty to send the publisher of the paper a written notice of the fact—stating, if possible, the reason why the paper is not taken. The returning to the publisher of a paper marked "not taken," "refused," or "uncalled for," is not a legal notice. Postmasters who fail to comply with the law in this respect are liable for the time said papers remain dead in their office.

HEWLETT'S LECTURE.—We had the pleasure on last Wednesday evening of hearing this gentleman in his celebrated lecture "Hits at the Times." It was the most pleasant evening we have spent for a long time. Mr. Hewlett as a speaker and as a mimic has few superiors. Considering that this was the beginning of a series of lectures, the audience was fair and appreciative. Yet we are compelled to state that many of our citizens who should have been prominent in a movement like this were not present. Had the entertainment been a slight-of-hand performance, the exhibition of minstrels, or a darkey show, the Hall would have been filled. We again appeal to our citizens to support the course of lectures selected. Those managing it are doing so solely for the benefit of the community, and while they reap no pecuniary advantage, they must pay from their own pockets all losses.

Our town and county should take a front rank in this matter, as it has in other educational enterprises. If the present course should be well patronized, by another season we could employ men of a more national reputation and of conceded ability. And here let us disabuse the minds of our own readers that the lecture, technically so-called is a dry speech or sermon, read from manuscript. It contains genuine wit, humor, eloquence, pathos, and is delivered or acted in the best possible manner. We trust all will turn out to hear Prof. Adams on next Friday, on "An evening with the Poets." His selections are excellent, and his rendering is equal to Murdoch or Dickens.

THE KALEIDOSCOPE

—A map of busy life,
—Its fluctuations and its vast concerns.'

NO. XCI.

AN ADVENTURE IN ECUADOR.

In that entertaining book "Four years among Spanish Americans," written by Hon. F. Hassaurek, late Minister resident of the United States at Quito, occurs the following passage: "Mr. Buckalew, the American Minister under Buchanan, once saved a man from a loss, which, according to the Ecuadorian himself, would have amounted to at least $10,000, simply by allowing him to hoist the American flag over his farm buildings." Having been intimately connected with that transaction I have determined to write it out in detail for the readers of the KALEIDOSCOPE.

Senor Antonio Salvador was son-in-law of Gen. Flores, a former President of Ecuador, and who had been banished by the dominant faction to Peru, from whence he plotted with other revolutionists for the overthrow of Gen. Robles and his administration. Salvador was a man of wealth and culture. He at one time had visited the United States, and while here had declared his intentions of becoming a citizen of our country. He had frequently visited the Legation, and done us many acts of kindness. Upon the breaking out of the revolution of May, 1859, (which I have described in a former paper,) Salvador naturally sympathized with Garcia Moreno, and his efforts to overthrow the Administration which had banished his father-in-law.

General Urbina, the acting Commander-in-Chief of the army, had placed himself at the head of the Government troops for the purpose of meeting an expected attack from Peru, but hearing of the success of the revolution in Quito, retraced his steps, defeated Morena and his force at Tumbucu, and was in full march towards the Capital. There all was consternation and uproar. The women sought the convents for safety, and the men who had reason to fear harsh treatment, either fled, or claimed protection at the different Legations. None were more frightened than Salvador. His hacienda, or farm was in the line of Urbina's march, he had just reason to apprehend that not only would his cattle and goods be seized, his property destroyed, but himself and family fall a victim to Urbina's vengeance. In this strait he sent a message to Minister Buckalew, beseeching him to give his protection to himself and property. It was a delicate position for Mr. Buckalew. The man was only in an incipient state of citizenship, and did not show any intention of returning to the United States to perfect his declaration of intentions. Besides, did not his participation in the rebellion deprive him of any rights under the de facto government?

In the then excited state of the Capital the Minister could not leave, and it was decided to send me, and I was to gather plants, hunt, or make any other excuse for my presence at Tambillo.

Accompanied by a man named Quesada, and bearing the flag of the Legation I started on my errand. The troops of the Provisional Government had blocked up the road in many places, so that we were obliged to make a detour by the Valley of Chillo. We arrived about 4 p. m., at Uyumbicho, the Head Quarters of the army, where we met Mr. Salvador. He was almost frantic with joy at seeing me, getting down and kissing my knees, and invoking the blessings of all the saints upon my head. I was introduced to the officers who treated me with the greatest respect, as the Provisional Government were especially anxious to be recognized by the United States as a valid Government, and they imagined my visit had some such object in view. The troops were paraded, and after many courtesies, we sat down to a fine dinner of roasted and stewed guinea pigs, game, etc.

Dinner over, a fresh horse was brought round to me. Mr. Salvador had selected for my use a magnificent animal, full of fire, and apparently as untamed as if just caught from the pampas. He even jumped at the clanking of my spurs on the paved terrace, and not being much of a horseman at the time, and encumbered with a gun, I inwardly cursed the politeness that threatened to transform me into a Mazeppa or a John Gilpin. However it would not answer to show fear in the presence of the officers, and while two peons held the fiery charger I mounted. The countersign was whispered in my ear, the horse unloosed, and he bounded from the corral, nearly knocking my head against the arch that covered the gateway. It was impossible to slacken his speed and away we dashed, through mud and water, up hill and down, through long dark avenues formed by the tropical plants twining over head,—until I completely distanced Salvador, Quesado and the servants. It now became dark—for under the Equator there is no twilight—and not knowing the way I trusted to his sagacity to take him to the hacienda. In a short time the picket line was reached, the cry "Halt, or I fire," reached my ears, but I could not stop; a bullet whizzed by my ears, and in a moment I was past the sentries. A ride of a few miles took me to Tambillo, and not until I reached its gates, did my horse, now covered with foam and trembling at every joint, slacken his speed. The servants refused to open the gates to a stranger, and I was compelled to await the arrival of my companions. As soon as Salvador came up we were taken in charge by the Mayor Domo, and the servants learning the cause of my presence, did everything in their power to make my stay pleasant and comfortable. The evening passed very agreeably. Salvador showed me the hiding place for his valuables which was ingeniously arranged. Above the door a hole had been cut in the thick adobe wall, which gave entrance to an apartment, the locality of which no one not in the secret could ever have suspected. I was placed in a nice cosy room overlooking a well kept garden filled with foreign and native plants and flowers, while the moonlight showed me grim Cotopaxi at a short distance, the plantation running almost to its base.

The next morning I was up as the beams of the sun were gilding the snow capped summit of Cotopaxi, from the crater of which the smoke curled lazily, forming huge columns in which the imagination could trace all sorts of fantastic images. Mr. Salvador took much pride in showing me his orange grove which produced fruit of unusual size and fragrance, and from there we went to the corral to see some of his cattle, of which he owned 2,000. The entire place was unusually clean, being neatly paved with sluices running in different directions to carry off the filth and rain. The cattle were large and fat,—certainly the finest group I had ever seen. Their hind legs were tied in order to milk them. Each Indian woman had ten cows under her charge, and milked them into buckets hollowed out of a solid block. Each cow yielded about a bucket-full and was milked but once a day. A huge tub in the dairy receives the milk. The cheese presses etc., were all in order, and had an appearance of neatness unusual in Ecuador. The Indians showed their skilfulness in throwing the lasso on horse back in order to secure some refractory cattle. Both cow and horse would be running at full speed, when the rider would throw his hide lasso, which seldom failed to settle round the horns of the animal. A few turns round the pommel of the saddle and the animal is checked, and sometimes so suddenly as to make it turn a complete somersault. In catching horses the lasso is thrown over their heads, and experience teaches them to stop to prevent being choked.

Towards noon a cloud of dust in the distance betokened the approach of Urbina's army. My host began to tremble with apprehension, but a flag-staff was quickly placed on the top of the house, and the stars and stripes soon floated in the breeze, an emblem of peace and power, respected even in that remote region. Towards evening Urbina and his troops arrived. They were a motley assemblage of negro lancers, and Indian infantry. The General made his Head Quarters at the village, and seemed much chagrined to find us there, expecting to get his supplies at Salvador's hacienda. However, he and his officers, most of whom I had known in Quito, treated us kindly. At my suggestion Salvador offered them the hospitalities of his house, which, however, were refused. He then sent down a well prepared supper, and gave the General a fine horse in lieu of his which was worn out. Gen. Urbina expressed some surprise at seeing the U.S. flag floating in that region. I informed him I was gathering some plants and hunting. With a smile he replied, "It is a fortunate thing for Salvador you are his guest at this time."

The following morning we spent in hunting and in the afternoon followed Urbina's army into Quito. The Provisional authorities, after destroying the bridges, retreated north-wards to Ibarra. QUIEN SABE?

A WELL known citizen of this town has lately lost a hen, whose car er in life has been marked by peculiarities which merit a passing notice. At the ripe age of fourteen years she died, and, although a fowl, with no foul spot on her character. At an early age she began the duties of her station, and continued for years an earnest and faithful layer. Convinced at length that her power as a producer of eggs were failing and possessing yet the maternal love which had characterized her earlier years, she accepted without a murmur the usually thankless office of stepmother, and many are the sons and daughters who have reached maturity under her fostering care.

Old age, however, laid its enfeebling hand upon her and deprived her of the privilege of hatching. With an undaunted spirit, she adopted a young family of orphan chickens and gave them a plain common sense education. This was her last effort, and, feeling that her duty was done, she retired from the world and quietly gave up the ghost. Her example is one which deserves the highest praise; as a teacher of youth and a conscientious performer of duty, she had much merit. Farewell, poor Bridle!

HON. GEO. SCOTT, our Member of the Legislature, was not present at the opening of the Legislature owing to the severe illness of his son-in-law, Mr. Reifsnyder. We are informed that he went on to Harrisburg Tuesday evening.

TWITCHELL has been found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Hill. The jury were out only thirty-five minutes. Not being a negro, i is not likely Geary will pardon him.

CONSERVATIVE PROSPECTS IN VIRGINIA.—The stand taken by the Virginia Democrats, coupling universal amnesty and universal suffrage excite the hope here of carrying the State for the Conservatives by 20,000 majority. Excellent feeling exists between the Conservatives and the blacks. It is believed that the constitution will be defeated, and one imposing no disqualifications adopted at a later day.

CONGRESS reassembled Tuesday. The brief session of eight weeks ought not only to be a busy session, but a fruitful one. There is plenty of good work before it, and there are any quantity of corrupt, foolish and ruinous schemes before it. We shall see which of these calls out most effort and labor.

CLOTHES BY MACHINERY.

The undersigned would respectfully call the attention of the public to his new and approved method of making clothes by a system based upon mathematical principles, which renders it impossible to be otherwise than perfectly accurate

He claims for this method the following advantages.

FIRST.

Perfect accuracy.

SECOND.

A saving of two thirds of the time usually taken to cut out the cloth.

THIRD.

Ability to measure any figure so as to insure a good fit.

FOURTH.

That it does away with the necessity of being measured more than once, as often is the case from the misapprehension or mistake of a measurer.

He would urge the public to give it a trial, as it is satisfied that it will give perfect satisfaction. He will be happy to exhibit and explain its working at any time to visitors.

NOTICE IN BANKRUPTCY.

This is to give notice: that on the 1st day of Dec. A. D. 1868, a warrant in bankruptcy was issued against the estate of Daniel Yeager, of Pine Grove township

Farmer's Department.

CARE OF YOUNG STOCK IN WINTER.—All kinds of young stock are tender and require more protection and care than older ones.

Colts that have been weaned in the fall should be stabled at night and be sheltered from storms in the day time; their stables should be well ventilated and the manure removed frequently, the oftener the better. Eyes and limbs are both often injured by the heating of manure and the rising of ammonia. The skin should be kept clean by using a stiff brush and woolen cloth; if the curry comb is used it should be handled very gently so as not to hurt or irritate the young animal. Feeding and watering should be regular at stated times just enough of food to eat and none to waste.

Calves and young cattle should be treated as above stated if you wish them to grow fast and keep in good condition, and young stock will never pay you unless you keep it constantly growing, for if they once get stunted it costs almost more than they are worth to give them a good start.

The truth is that many of our calves and colts get a "stunt" while young, which they do not recover from for years, if they ever do. A perfect animal can never be obtained unless its wants are liberally supplied, in regard to food, shelter and comfortable accommodations. Some animals are fed well but are so cramped for room that, like a vigorous tree in a stone wall, they can scarcely grow without pushing the barn over. Others are fed well, but are so exposed to cold and storms that they grow very slowly, or yield little milk.

Too liberal use of grain for young animals is undoubtedly injurious. No farmer of good judgment need err in this particular.

FARMERS' CLUBS.—These should abound in every agricultural district; and where there is none to be found, the reason, by looking around, is soon explained. "Oh," says one, "what is to be gained by a farmers' club? Does any one pretend to teach me how to raise a crop of potatoes, of oats, corn, wheat, rye, buckwheat or barley? Why I've been all my life at it, and if I am igaorant of my business at this time of day, I may as well give it up." The old proverb, "a wise man in his own conceit," &c. It is difficult to deal with wise men of this sort. They scout all Idea that they can be better informed in their business, and at the same time they are unwilling to assist in instructing and helping along others who are not so wise, experienced and superior as themselves.

The truth is, these are the very people to take the lead in getting up social clubs, and if they had the disposition they could do more than any others. They possess the knowledge, means and position to make themselves felt in their instruction, example and exercises. These clubs should be informally organized and thus be of as little expense as possible. The (weekly) evening of meeting at one another's houses should be specific, and the places designated at a preceding meeting. All that is necessary is that there should be an intelligent secretary. Any proceedings taking place at these meetings whenever they possess any interest, will find a ready welcome in these columns.—Germantown Tel.

HOW TO SAVE CATTLE FOOD.—Farmers plow and harrow, and sow and reap, thresh and garner their crops with commendable industry and skill, and yet, by a want of close attention to minor details, very frequently loose the larger proportion of their profits. In a former article we asserted what all experience has proven to be the truth, that comfortable shelter for stock is equivalent to a certain amount of food, that is, that stock can be carried through the winter in as good condition if well sheltered, upon a much smaller quantity of food, than if exposed to the inclemency of the weather, as is too often the case.

Let any farmer, whose sheds are bleak and open, ponder this subject well. Let him try a little experiment on part of his stock. Give to one portion of it a comfortable warm, but well ventilated apartment, and to another, one that is open and exposed to the elements. Let him see to it, that the well sheltered portion is regularly housed in weather requiring it, while the other is permitted to take its chances. Let him carefully weigh or measure the amount of food supplied to each, and if, when spring comes, he does not find his well cared for stock in better condition upon a greatly smaller amount of food than the other, we will consent to be set down as perfect ignoramuses upon this point. Try it, satisfy yourselves and let us have the result.—Journal of Farmers.

QUINSY OR ULCERATED SORE-THROAT.—Those who suffer from this distressing malady, will be thankful to hear of a simple and efficacious mode of relief—viz: an onion poultice. Bake or roast three or four large onions, or half a dozen smaller ones, till soft. Peel them quickly, and beat them flat with a rolling-pin or glass bottle. Then put them directly into a thin muslin bag that will reach from ear to ear, and about three inches deep. Apply it speedily, and as warm as possible to the throat. Keep it on day and night, changing it when the strength of the onions appear to be exhausted, and substituting fresh ones. Flannel must be worn round the neck after the poultice is removed.

A GOAT EATS GREENBACKS.—On Saturday a citizen paid his servant girl her regular week's wages. After receiving them she walked into the yard, and while hanging clother upon a line, she dropped the money, without her knowledge at the moment. A goat that was browsing in the yard saw the tempting roll, and was engaged in leisurely eating it. A half-dollar note was hanging out of its mouth when the frantic servant discovered her loss. She only succeeded in saving the currency note. The others have gone where specie payment will never be resumed.—Phil. News.

WOOD ASHES.—Every bushel of wood ashes applied to the corn crop, is worth one dollar. The truth of this assertion has been repeatedly demonstrated by the result of experiments accurately conducted. On all light soils the action of ashes is highly energetic and salutary; they exert a warming and invigorating influence, and promote the rapid growth of almost every species of production.

For The Young Folks.

Riquet with the Tuft.

(Concluded.)

At length arrived a Prince so rich, so witty, and so handsome, that she could not help feeling an inclination for him. Her father, having perceived it, told her that he left her at perfect liberty to choose a husband for herself, and that she had only to make known her decision. As the more sense we possess, the more difficulty we find in making up one's mind positively on such a matter, she requested, after having thanked her father, that he would allow her some time to think of it. She went, by chance, to walk, in the same wood where she had met with Riquet with the Tuft, in order to ponder with greater freedom on what she had to do. While she was walking, deep in thought she heard a dull sound beneath her feet, as of many persons running to and fro, and busily occupied. Having listened more attentively, she heard one say, "Bring me that saucepan;" another, "Give me that kettle;" another, "Put some wood on the fire." At the same moment the ground opened, and she saw beneath her what appeared to be a large kitchen, full of cooks, scullions, and all sorts of servants necessary for the preparation of a magnificent banquet. There came forth a band of from twenty to thirty cooks, who went and established themselves in an avenue of the wood at a very long table, and who, each with larding-pin in hand and the queue de renard behind the ear, set to work, keeping time to a melodious song.

The Princess, astonished at this sight, inquired for whom they were working. "Madam," replied the most prominent of the troop, "for Prince Riquet with the Tuft, whose marriage will take place to-morrow." The Princess, still more surprised than she was before, and suddenly recollecting that it was just a twelvemonth from the day on which she had promised to marry Prince Riquet with the Tuft, was lost in amazement. The cause of her not having remembered her promises was, that when she made it she was a fool, and on receiving her new mind, she forgot all her follies. She had not taken thirty steps in continuation of her walk, when Riquet with the Tuft presented himself before her, gaily and magnificently attired, like a Prince about to be married. "You see, Madam," said he, "I keep my word punctually, and I doubt not but that you have come either to keep yours, and to make me by the gift of your hand, the happiest of men." "I confess to you, frankly," replied the Princess, "that I have not yet made up my mind on that matter, and that I do not think I shall ever be able to do so to your satisfaction." "You astonish me, Madam," said Riquet with the Tuft. "I have no doubt I do," said the Princess; "and assuredly, had I to deal with a stupid person—a man without mind,—I should feel greatly embarrassed. 'A Princess is bound by her word,' he would say to me, 'and you must marry me, as you have promised to do so.' But as the person to whom I speak is the most sensible man in all the world, I am certain he will listen to reason. You know that, when I was no better than a fool, I nevertheless could not marry you—how can you expect, now that I have the sense which you have given me, and which renders me much more difficult to please than before, that I should take a resolution to-day which I could not do then? If you seriously thought of marrying me, you did very wrong to take away my stupidity, and enable me to see clearer than I saw then." "If a man without sense," replied Riquet with the Tuft, "should meet with some indulgence, as you have just intimated, had he to reproach you with your breach of promise, why would you, Madam, that I should not be equally so in a matter which affects the entire happiness of my life? Is it reasonable that persons of intellect should be in a worse condition than those who have none? Can you assert this—you who have so much and have so earnestly desired to possess it? But let us come to the point, if you please. With the exception of my ugliness, is there anything in me that displeases you? Are you dissatisfied with my birth, my understanding, my temper, or my manners?" "Not in the least," replied the Princess; "I admire in you everything you have mentioned." "If so," rejoined Riquet with the Tuft, "I shall be happy, as you have it in your power to make me the most agreeable of men." "How can that be done?" said the Princess. "It can be done," said Riquet with the Tuft, "if you love me sufficiently to wish that it should be. And in order, Madam, that you should have no doubt about it, know that the same fairy, who on the day I was born, endowed me with the power to give understanding to the person I chose, gave you also the power to render handsome the man you should love, and on whom you were desirous to bestow that favour.' "If such be the fact," said the Princess, "I wish, with all my heart, that you should become the handsomest Prince in the world, and I bestow the gift on you to the fullest extent of my power."

The Princess had no sooner pronounced these words, than Riquet with the Tuft appeared to her eyes, of all men in the world, the handsomest, the best made and most amiable she had ever seen. There are some who assert that it was not the spell of the Fairy, but love alone that caused this metamorphosis. They say that the Princess, having reflected on the perseverance of her lover—on his prudence, and all the good qualities of his heart and mind, no longer saw the deformity of his body nor the ugliness of his features—that his hunch appeared to her nothing more than the effect of a man shrugging his shoulders, and that instead of observing, as she had done, that he limped horribly, she saw in him no more than a certain lounging air, which charmed her. They say also that his eyes, which squinted, seemed to her only more brilliant from that defect, which passed in her mind for a proof of the intensity of his love, and, in fine, that his great red nose had in it something martial and heroic. However this may be, the Princess promised on the spot to marry him, provided he obtained the consent of the King, her Father. The King, having learned that his daughter entertained a great regard for Riquet with the Tuft, whom he knew also to be a very clever and wise prince, accepted him with pleasure for a son-in-law. The wedding took place the next morning, as Riquet with the Tuft had foreseen, and, according to the instructions which he had given a long time before.

DRUGS & MEDICINES.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
Hoofland's German Tonic.
Prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
The Great Remedies
FOR ALL DISEASES OF THE LIVER, STOMACH, or DIGESTIVE ORGANS.

Hoofland's German Bitters

Is compounded of the pure juices, for as they are medicinally termed, Extracts of Roots, Herbs and Barks, making a preparation, highly concentrated, and entirely free from Alcoholic admixture of any kind.

Hoofland's German Tonic,

Is a combination of all the ingredients of the Bitters, with the purest quality of Santa Cruz Rum, Orange, etc., making one of the most pleasant and agreeable remedies ever offered to the public.
Those preferring a Medicine free from Alcoholic admixture, will use

Hoofland's German Bitters.

In cases of nervous depression, when some alcoholic stimulus is necessary,

Hoofland's German Tonic

should be used.

The Bitters or the Tonic are both equally good, and contain the same medicinal virtues. The stomach, from a variety of causes, such as Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, etc., is very apt to have its functions deranged. The result of which is, that the patient suffers from several or more of the following diseases:

Constipation, Flatulence, Inward Piles, Fulness of Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fulness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Flutterings at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a Lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

These remedies will effectually cure Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Chronic or Nervous Debility, Chronic Diarrhœa, Disease of the Kidneys, and all Diseases arising from a Disordered Liver, Stomach or Intestines.

DEBILITY.

Resulting from any cause whatever, PROSTRATION OF THE SYSTEM, Induced by Bad or Local Habits, Imprudence, Excesses, etc.

There is no medicine extant equal to these remedies in such cases. A tone and vigor is imparted to the whole system. The appetite is strengthened, food is enjoyed, the stomach digests promptly, the blood is purified, the complexion becomes healthy, the yellow tinge is eradicated from the eyes, a bloom is given to the cheeks, and the weak and nervous invalid becomes a strong and healthy being.

Persons Advanced in Life,

And feeling the symptoms creeping nearly upon them, with any of the maladies, will find in the use of the BITTERS, or the TONIC, an elixir that will impart new life into their veins, restore in a measure the energy and ardor of those joyful days of youth, their shrunken forms, and give health and happiness to their remaining years.

NOTICE.

It is a well-established fact that fully one-half of the female population are suffering in the enjoyment of good health, and are unable to use their own expression, "they do not feel well." They are languid, devoid of energy, extremely nervous, and have no appetite. To this class the BITTERS, or the TONIC, is especially recommended.

WEAK AND DELICATE CHILDREN

Are made strong by the use of either of these remedies. Do not delay in a case of MARASMUS, it will kill.

Thousands of certificates have accumulated in the hands of the proprietor, but space will allow of the publication of but a few. These, it will be observed, are men of the first and of such standing that they must be believed.

TESTIMONIALS.

Hon. Geo. W. Woodward,
Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pa., writes.

Philadelphia, March 16, 1867.

"I find 'Hoofland's German Bitters' is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in cases of debility, and want of nervous action in the system.

"Yours truly,
"GEO. W. WOODWARD."

Hon. James Thompson,
Judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, April 28, 1866.

"I consider 'Hoofland's German Bitters' a valuable medicine in cases of attacks of indigestion or dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it.

"Yours, with respect,
"JAMES THOMPSON."

From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, D.D.,
Pastor of the Tenth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.

Dr. Jackson—Dear Sir: I have been frequently requested to connect my name to recommendations of different kinds of medicines, regarding the great impropriety of such a course. In all cases of my acquaintance, where I have known Hoofland's German Bitters to be used, they have given entire satisfaction. I have no hesitancy in recommending them to the afflicted, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I can speak from my usual source, to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a most valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail, but usually, I doubt not, it will be very beneficial to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very truly,
H. KENNARD,
Eighth, below Clarke St.

From Rev. E. D. Fendall,
Assistant Editor Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.

I have derived decided benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly,
E. D. FENDALL.
